

Can the fiber optic box be removed from the home

Overview

After fibre installation, the old copper line becomes redundant but may still be physically connected. Avoid DIY removal to prevent damage to. We have fibre now but there are 3 Openreach boxes in different rooms in the house that are now redundant/we will never use them and want to remove them and the wiring to them. It's not a router, and it's not a traditional modem. The Optical Network Terminal (ONT) is the main connection point between the. The "please do not remove" bit is for the bank when it repossesses your house, letting it know that the boc belongs to AT&T, not you. In the future I'll be getting fibre optic which I imagine will be a different cable. Should they have?

(and who is going to do this?)
